

You'll never know what it's like to be an HIV positive mother in Africa

by Loulla-Mae Eleftheriou-Smith, added 28 hours ago

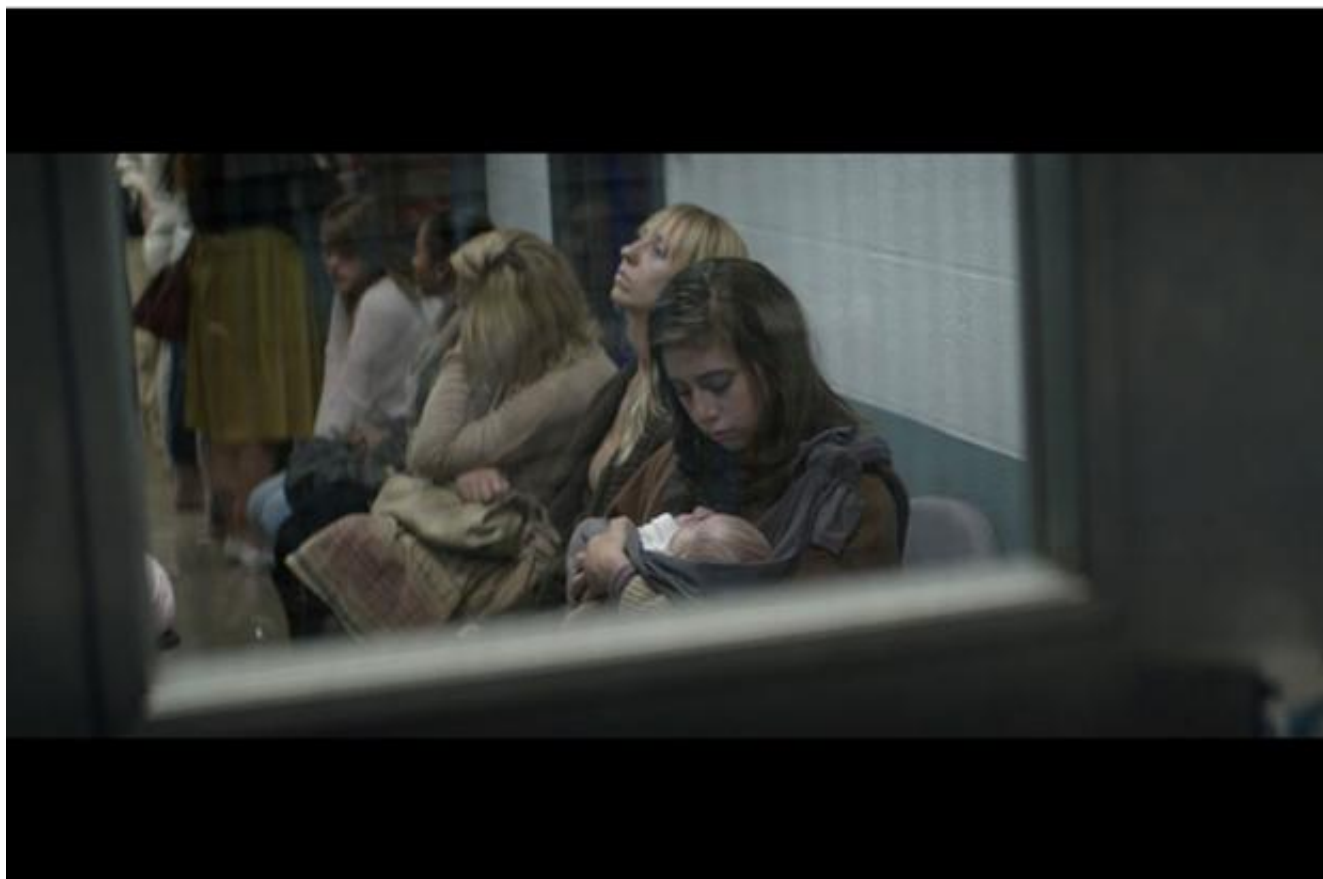

Tweet

4

Like

8

Share

Walking miles to a clinic, being kicked out of home, giving birth alone and waiting to find out if your baby has HIV - all shown here happening in Western society.

The film puts the experience of HIV-positive African mothers in the narrative of a Western woman living in a global city dealing with an over-stretched health system, and the lack of support experienced by some of the 1.3m HIV positive pregnant women in sub-Saharan Africa each year.

Charity mothers2mothers are helping to prevent HIV-positive women pass the disease onto their babies and reduce child and maternal mortality rates.

Director: Martin de Thurah

Charity: mothers2mothers

Agency: BBH

mothers2mothers: A World Apart

mothers2mothers United Kingdom Government / Non-Profit Europe BBH Charities
Marketing Digital marketing

Tweet 4 Like 8 Share

FURTHER READING